CALENDAR

June 13	SPRING MEETING – Tour Eversole-Hall House, Readington Twp. Museum – Stephanie Stevens. 1:30 p.m., Route 523, Whitehouse Station.
July 3	Library Closed – Independence Day weekend
September 4	Library Closed – Labor Day weekend
November 21	FALL MEETING

Spend a spring afternoon in the country! On 13 June, the Hunterdon County Historical Society members and friends have been invited to visit the tiny Eversole-Hall House on Route 523 next to the Readington Township Municipal Building, south of Whitehouse Station. This is Hunterdon's newest museum, the Readington Township Museum. The House will be open for tours on the 13th beginning at 1:30. Parking and rest rooms will be available at the township building where Readington Township Historian Stephanie B. Stevens will be speaking with us at 2 p.m.

The endeavor to create a museum was spearheaded by Mrs. Stevens, who has worked to see her dream become a happy reality. She encouraged the township to purchase the house next to the municipal building and solicited the help of volunteer labor to turn the house into a township museum. Carpenters, painters, laborers, etc., a dedicated group of volunteers, worked every other Saturday morning from 9 a.m. until noon for two years and three months to repair, restore, and prepare the former King house to be the Readington Township Museum. Now open and receiving visitors, it will soon have joyous youngsters attending camp, learning how to make samplers, roll hoops, and other things children in earlier times did. Hear Mrs. Stevens relate how this dream became a reality. She will illustrate her story with slides depicting the museum's progress.

Come join us at the Readington Township Museum/Municipal building on Sunday, 13 June 1993 at 1:30 p.m. Tours of the Eversole-Hall House will precede and follow Mrs. Stevens' presentation. Refreshments and social hour will conclude the afternoon.

Shad Fisheries Booklet Published

As early as 1685, Delaware River shad were being touted by colonial entrepreneur Thomas Budd. A century later [1785] New Jersey and Pennsylvania agreed to regulate fisheries on the river. Did you know that nearly 175 years ago there were 32 fisheries along the Delaware River within the present boundaries of Hunterdon County, employing about 130 men during spawning season? Now only the Lewis Island Fishery at Lambertville continues this centuries old tradition along the Delaware. These "fishy" facts and many others can be discovered in a new book written by Phyllis B. D'Autrechy, Hunterdon County New Jersey Fisheries 1819-1820.

Her book was published by Hunterdon County Historical Society, and delivered from Bradford Press, Inc. in time for the annual Lambertville Shad Festival, April 24 and 25. Historical background on shad fishing and the names and locations of fisheries within Hunterdon County, are packed into this 44 page soft cover booklet, which also includes maps and illustrations, and a full-name/subject index. Copies are $7.50 each and may be purchased, either in person or by mail, from the Hunterdon Historical Society at its headquarters building at 114 Main Street in Flemington [908-782-1091].

Railroad Strike of 1877

Imagine a warm, sunny, spring day. You're reading in your Social Studies book that "FEDERAL TROOPS BROKE THE RAILROAD STRIKE OF 1877." Possibly you underlined this sentence as a possible question on the weekly quiz but your mind dwells more on what's happening after school than considering that this event had any effect on rural Hunterdon County and its citizens. How wrong you are!

Violent disputes characterized organized labor's early years. Strikes became the strongest weapon of the unions. One of the most important strikes occurred in 1877 when railroad companies were in financial trouble – some bankrupt and many drained by railroad speculators. Companies tried to save money by cutting already low wages which ranged from $5.40 to $7.00 a week.

The 1877 strike for improved wages began on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad after the company announced the fourth wage cut in seven years. Rioting spread quickly and cars, locomotives, and buildings were destroyed in the confusion.

Despite attempts of the local militia, order was not restored until President Hayes sent federal troops into Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Illinois. As a result, the strike was a complete failure and the labor movement had been dealt a serious blow. The American labor movement made very slow progress in the 19th century.

In quiet Hunterdon the results of the labor unrest were felt on the train routes from Junction to Somerville in Somerset County. On Thursday 25 July 1877, J.D. Bedle, Governor of New Jersey, sent a telegram to Hunterdon Sheriff Westly Bellis "advising him to summon a posse of men to guard the property of the railroad and citizens from the threatened destruction (by) a large number of strikers who had there assembled."

On the hottest day of the season "seven or eight men were found willing to accompany the Sheriff and Prosecutor Rafferty to the scene of expected outbreak" in the strike of brakemen of the Central Railroad. The Flemington deputies were sent in all directions to muster up recruits" with the inducement of $1.00 a day wages. By departure time the "posse was enlarged to nearly 150 men, Clinton Borough furnishing a majority of the party. Casper Henry, Constable of High Bridge, John Emery, Constable of Clinton Township and Joseph W. Berry, Constable of Clinton Borough assisted the Sheriff in this responsibility.

In the meantime, one train had been boarded in Flagtown and another at Three Bridges where the train crews were warned "not to venture out on the morrow (Friday) at the peril of their lives." Guards were placed on the trains Friday night and Saturday but "no trouble was experienced by the outgoing or incoming trains." Seven or eight soldiers reported the track clear to Somerville where about 300 soldiers from Governor's Island, New York were present.

The posse finally left Flemington supplied with guns, ammunition and pistols by Coon and Gano and J.P. Bodine of Flemington and Case and Runyan of Clinton. Teams and wagons were driven by Charles Beatty and son, James P. Huffman, William Henderson, and Jacob Veight.

N. J. CENTRAL R. R. STATION, Flemington, N. J.

"Arriving at Junction a small party of strikers were found, and at no time during the two days in which the Sheriff's guard held the town did the strikers number above one hundred. They were peaceable, however, and only upon one or two occasions were they at all demonstrative. The Sheriff's posse were fed at Sullivan's Hotel, and as they had no fighting to do, the affair turned out to be a sort of pleasant picnic."

The Sheriff was relieved on Saturday afternoon when a company of State Militia arrived at Junction. Earlier that day a train passed through loaded with soldiers and cannon bound for Phillipsburg "which town was pretty well under the control of a mob."

On Sunday the Sheriff was again sent for to "attend to some citizens of that place and Clinton who were endeavoring to inspire the strikers to riot and bloodshed. The Sheriff immediately started."

On Monday, two men, Snyder and Raymond, were arrested at Junction charged with being the leaders of the strike. They were returned to Flemington and confined in the county jail with bail set at $1500 and $2000 respectively.

One month after the initial disturbance, the State brought its case against William H. Raymond to court. "The indictment was found upon the act of last winter, making it a crime to interfere with, molest, or obstruct any railroad employee or the track or the rolling stock of any railroad during a strike in aid and furtherance of the objects of said strike." Raymond did not deny the facts and the jury rendered a verdict of "guilty." Raymond was sentenced to serve two months in the County Jail. The local newspaper does not reveal Snyder's fate.

The expenses of the strike concerned the Board of Chosen Freeholders for another year before all the bills had been submitted and paid. The total cost to the county was $1490.03.

JIMMY CANE? HARRY CANE?

In response to What's a "Jimmy Cane" on page 661 of the previous issue, Nancy B., NJHS Library suggests it may be a Harry Cane (translation Hurricane) and refers to page 101 in the April 1993 issue of American Heritage. It reads in part, "Their boat large and hevvy-loaded come on like a harry Cane."

Be A HCHS Volunteer?

Hunterdon County Historical Society seeks volunteers with time to give and varied talents and skills. Right now we have an immediate need for two volunteers – gardener and clerical assistant. With spring comes the welcome sights and smells of flowers – but also the weeds pop out! The Doric House flower gardens and yard need someone to provide TLC. Can we match one of you with a desire to garden to our need for a gardener or two? Perhaps an hour a week or every other week would spruce up our yard.

A backlog of filing needs the attention of a clerical assistant who could give us a couple hours once a month and/or be available on a call-when-needed basis to file correspondence, address envelopes, and give us a hand with office duties.

To volunteer please call 908-781-1091. If someone cannot take your call, leave your name and telephone number and your call will be returned as soon as possible.
