Horsehair: A Textile Resource Topic of Fall Meeting

"It was only day before yesterday that horsehair touched most Americans," recalls Marjorie Congram. Just mentioning horsehair recalls for some the sensation of sitting on grandma's sofa!

Mrs. Congram will be the guest speaker at the Society's Fall Meeting, at 2 p.m. on Sunday, November 22, in the Womens Club on Park Avenue in Flemington. Her presentation, including slides, specimens of haircloth upholstery, a belt, necklaces and other miniature objects, will especially interest lovers of antique furniture, textile collectors, and horse owners.

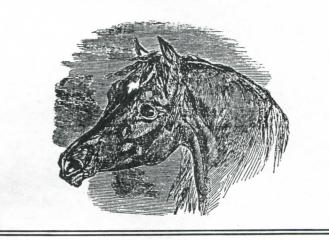

The most apparent use of horsehair was in upholstery on antique furniture. But, it was also used in wigs and clothing - petticoats, bustles and hats. Horsehair is still a viable textile resource, used today in fancy belts, horse gear, and handicrafts.

Marjorie Congram is a free lance writer on antiques, collectibles and local history whose articles have appeared in various newspapers, Spinning Wheel, Western Horseman and Nineteenth Century magazines. She is a former curator at the Marshall House in Lambertville where her efforts publicized events in the lives of the Marshall family and the historic site. Mrs. Congram wrote "Fortunes of the Marshall House In Lambertville" which was published in our Society's Newsletter, [Volume 10, 1-3, Fall 1974].

An invitation is extended to members and friends to attend the Fall Meeting and enjoy Mrs. Congram's presentation. Refreshments will be served following the meeting.

Society Buys Rare Kase Fraktur

Gertraut Kase's birth in 1771 is the life event memorialized on a rare piece of folk art, an attractively hand-decorated fraktur, bought by this Society. We first learned about its existence in 1988 when Ronald Trauger, a collector/dealer in Pennsylvania German fraktur (taufschein) art brought it to the Society. He was hoping to identify the Amwell Township, Hunterdon County Kase family whose daughter, Gertraut, it recorded.

Fraktur is the term used today to broadly describe examples of calligraphy and manuscript illumination executed in the German tradition in America. It is a folk art form has not usually been attributed to New Jersey. However, Mr. Trauger held an exquisite example of folk art, in which the birth of Gertraut, daughter of Johannes and Margaret Jungin(Young) Kase, born in 1771 in Amwell Township, Hunterdon County New Jersey was commemo-

It was attributed to a well-documented Pennsylvania artist, Johann Freidrich Krebs,¹ whose only known New Jersey decorated document was this Hunterdon County Kase example.

In his brief visit to the Society library, Mr. Trauger was not successful in making Gertraut's Kase family identification. He was kind enough to allow us to photograph his fraktur for inclusion in the Kase files. Then earlier this year he wrote offering to sell the Society his fraktur.

Seize the opportunity! That's precisely what the Society trustees did when Mr. Trauger offered this one-of-a-kind piece of New Jersey folk art. It is the only known fraktur that Freidrich Krebs, the scrivener, ever did for a New Jersey family. His work, with this one exception, was exclusively in eastern Pennsylvania.

Johann Friedrich Krebs [1749-1815] was a Hessian mercenary hired by the British crown to support its cause during the American Revolution. After the war he remained in the United States, settling in Dauphin County, PA. He taught school and produced a body of notable fraktur work, including birth and baptismal certificates, marriage documents and other illustrated drawings depicting ancient German popular and religious themes. Decorated printed taufscheins attributed to him circa 1780-1810 are represented in numerous collections, the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Center at Williamsburg, VA as well as other museums and with private collectors. One fraktur similar in style and content to the Kase one is in the New York Historical-Society collection.

Krebs's fraktur drawings exhibit four different methods of decoration over his period of activity, covering about three decades. The four techniques overlap and Style II, such as the Kase fraktur, depicts his technique on printed forms, which he began using about 1790. With the heartshaped certificate, he used two colors [red and green on the Kase fraktur] and sometimes augmented his drawings with early block stamps or cutouts.

The Kase fraktur/taufschein measures 16 inches by 13 inches and is printed [at Reading Pennsylvania] and written in German by Krebs. It records the birth and baptism of Gertraut, daughter of Mr. Johannes Kase and Margareta Jungin [Young] Kase, who was born the 12th day of November and baptized by Reverend "Nebling" pastor of the Reformed Church at "Neu" Jersey in "Hunderding" County in "Anwell" Township. It is hand-drawn with hearts and flowers, lettered and watercolored in red and green.

Reverend John Wesley Gilbert Neveling was a German Reformed minister in New Jersey, known to have served the German Reformed Church in Amwell Township from 1770 until 1782. Although the church building has long been disappeared, it stood in the center of the old German cemetery, now known as Larison's Corner, on the Old York Road between Ringoes and Reaville.

Subsequent study of the Kase material in the Society's library during the interim between Mr. Trauger's offer and our acceptance, identified Gertraut's family. Johannes Kase was a member of the Kase family closely associated with the Amwell Township area. It is documented by Henry Z. Jones, in his The Palatine Families of New York & New Jersey: Some Later Arrivals 1717-1776 [pp. 136-139], that Johann Philip Käs and Anthony Käs came to America from Germany in the 1720s.

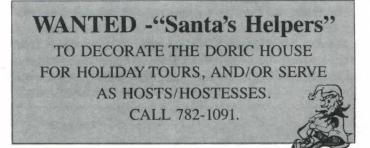

Johannes Kase was possibly born in Germany before his parents, Anthony(Tunis) and Eva Catharina Kase emigrated here circa 1729. Their names last occur on the church books at Rückeroth in 1728 in a baptismal record of their unnamed son. Among the children of Peter Young [-1786] and his wife Elizabeth, was a daughter, Margaret, born 1 October 1733, whom Johannes Kase married. Johannes's estate was probated in Hunterdon County on 4 November 1793. His heirs were Gertraut (anglicized as Charity in her father's will), and her siblings John, who inherited property in Amwell Township, William, Peter, and Godfrey, who each inherited lands in Alexandria Township, Jacob, who inherited the homestead in Amwell (near Koughstown [Clover Hill]) and Catharine, Mary, Elizabeth and Margaret Kase.

Four Raub brothers, Philip, Peter, George [1705-1780] and Michael, emigrated to America from Germany, arriving at the port of Philadelphia in 1732. They settled in the portion of Bucks County from which Northampton County was later formed. George's grandson, Ludwig Raub and Gertraut Kase were married 2 February 1808 in the German church in Williams Township, and resided south of Easton, Pennsylvania. It remains for Kase/Case family historians to determine how Gertraut and Ludwig met and married. At least three sons and possibly a daughter were born to them. Gertraut's obituary appeared in the 5 February 1835 edition of Der Friedens-Bothe published in Allentown, Pennsylvania: "Northampton County: Died - of dropsy on January 17th in Williams Township, Northampton County, Gertrude Raub, wife of Ludwig Raub, aged 63 years, 2 months, 5 days." By calculation, one can determine her birth date as November 12, 1771, the birth date memorialized on the Krebs fraktur.

The Board of trustees acknowledges Society Life member David McGrail, from whom the Trustees sought counsel before making the purchase and who has since made a generous donation toward same. He is the author of "Late Eighteenth and Early Nineteenty-Century Illuminated New Jersey Documents: An introduction and a Checklist" published in New Jersey History, Volume 105, Numbers 1-2, (Spring/Summer 1987). Assistance from Frances Wise Waite and Donna Humphrey at Spruance Library, Bucks County Historical Society, and Sandy Froberg, Marx Room, Easton Public Library with research on the Raub family and locating Introduction Raub Family History, by Edward B. Raub, 1943.

In the holiday spirit, give a gift to offset the fraktur's purchase price, $1,500. Usually when the Society finds a significant object to acquire for the collections, donations to purchase it are solicited beforehand. However, in this instance, because of time, the Society made the acquisition with the intention of later soliciting donations toward its cost. The Society welcomes contributions earmarked for the Kase Fraktur Fund which may be sent to Fraktur, Hunterdon County Historical Society, 114 Main Street, Flemington, NJ 08822.

What Choice?

It's hard to imagine what choice we would make if we were asked to declare our allegiance to a loosely organized group of men from locales so varied that they couldn't be compared in most aspects, without an organized army, established leaders, and a unified monetary system. Yet, this is what was expected of the men of New Jersey in 1776 after the State declared its independence from the King of Great Britain. Loyalties were deep-seated and many families were split by the ocean which separated them. How much did average citizens of rural communities throughout the colonies understand of the complex workings of international politics? Most of them were so busy scratching a living from this new land that they must have fallen exhausted into beds most evenings. They had no local newspapers, were far from urban sophistication - basically isolated from all but major events along the Eastern seaboard. Certainly the movements of the American and British armies in the period right after the Declaration of Independence brought the impact of war very close to home. Local residents soon learned to fear the enemy, especially the enemy from within. Action had to be taken to separate those loyal to the King and those in sympathy with the rebels.

On Sept 1776 the Legislature of the new State of New Jersey set forth an act entitled "An Act for the Security of the Government of New Jersey." This act required citizens to take an oath of Abjuration and Allegiance to the State of New Jersey. There were many who complied with the new law, but there were those who weren't convinced the colonists were moving in the right direction. If a man flatly refused to take the oath, he was permitted to live in the county after posting an extensive bond ensuring that he would "keep the peace and be of good behavior towards all the Leige Subjects of the State." After all, many had been productive members of the community.

The following men of Hunterdon County refused to take the oath in 1776 and 1777 but posted a recognizance bond. The entry below gives the name of the Loyalist and the name of the bondsman. The number of the recognizance bond follows each entry.*

As in any time of conflict there are always those who speak out against what they believe is wrong. John Vent of Kingwood Township, yeoman, was one of these. In May 1778, the jurors of the Court of Common Pleas found him guilty of "being a pernicious and disaffected man and a person of a turbulent mind and seditious disposition and conversation" who "falsely, maliciously, advisedly and seditiously intended to terrify... the good subjects of this state in order to dispose them to favour the pretensions of the enemy and to alienate the affections of the People from the present government." The suit arose from a conversation that Vent had with Jonathan Hide and Josiah Moore in Kingwood Township in April 1778. Vent said that he damned "the Congress and all their Proceedings." Vent declared that he had two brothers in the British army commanded by General Sir William How and wished that he was with them. Stephen Barton was the foreman of the jury which indicted John Vent. The disposition of the case is not recorded. (Indictment 3150)

The same charges of seditious words were brought against John Stillwell of Hopewell Township. Supposedly on 4 Jan. 1777 he told Jacob Quick, a subject of the State, that for two days he had been writing "Protections" as an agent of the King of Great Brittain. (It is presumed that these Protections were documents used by residents to obtain protection from the English army – passes, etc.) For these he had received "hard money." He admitted that he would do it again. Whether he ever got the chance again we do not know. (Indictment 3151-1/2)

John Magard of Lebanon Township took action against the State a month later. With four others he carried guns and bayonets belonging to the United States to the Enemy. Magard was indicted by the jury of which Abraham Prall was the foreman. Evidence was brought against him by Mary Clifford but again the documents do not give the final results of the case. (Indictment 2428)

And then there are those who, like John McClane, was charged with "going over to the enemy." (Recognizance 2285)

With deep regret the Board of Trustees accepted Paulene Stothoff's resignation as Membership Secretary at its September meeting. Paulene has faithfully performed her responsibilities since succeeding Miss Edith Jones in 1967. Back then the Society had only about 200 members, whereas now there are over 500 members through the Country and three outside the United States.

The Board and the members will miss Paulene's pleasant manner and efficiency in handling your membership matters. To her goes our appreciation and thanks for twentyfive years of volunteer service to our Society.

Hunterdon County Census of 1875

A periodic enumeration of the population of the United States has been taken by the federal government every ten years beginning in 1790. As many of you know, the Federal census of 1920 was opened for public research this year.

Unfortunately the census records for New Jersey are missing until 1830.

New Jersey began its own enumeration in the middle of the decade beginning with 1855 and continuing until 1915, of which none are indexed. In the archives of the Hunterdon County Clerk, a partial set for Hunterdon County 1855 is stored, for which an index has been compiled.

According to the Guide to Family History Sources in the New Jersey State Archives, there are only incomplete sets for two counties of the 1875 New Jersey census. A complete set of the 1875 New Jersey census of Hunterdon County has been discovered in the County Clerk's archives and a computerized index of over 44,000 names has been completed. The census provides the name of the resident (all members of a household), age, sex, native or foreignborn, color, birthplace of individual and parents, and occupation. There are also agricultural and industrial schedules for most of the townships.

Using the index, research may be done on the census records in three ways: 1) The records may be examined at the office of County Clerk Dorothy Tirpok, Lower Search Room, Hall of Records, Main Street, Flemington. 2) A copy of the census page may be had for 50 cents each when you visit the office in person. By mail the cost is $1 per page for a copy of each census page and requests must be accompanied by a check made out to the Hunterdon County Clerk. 3) If you just wish to have the index checked for the surname of interest to you, send a SASE (self-addressed, stamped envelope) to the Hunterdon County Cultural & Heritage Commission, marked to the attention of Phyllis D'Autrechy, County Administration Building, Flemington, NJ 08822.
