FALL MEETING 2 P.M. NOVEMBER 23

Hunterdon County abounds with 18th and 19th century homes so it is understandable that the Historical Society frequently receives inquiries about how these houses may be nominated to the State Register of Historic Places. The Fall Meeting on 23 November will answer some of these questions.

Guest speaker Richard L. Porter has worked in the related fields of Historic Preservation and Cultural Resource Management for nearly a decade. He specializes in projects requiring detailed documentary research and has extensive experience in the fields of historical and industrial archeology and architectural history. The successful completion of nomination forms relative to the New Jersey and National Registers of Historic Places has been a component of his work and he has been involved in several such projects within Hunterdon County. Mr. Porter is a resident of Hopewell Township and has just moved into a new office, a converted rail car in Ringoes.

Plan to attend the Historical Society's Fall Meeting on November 23 at 2 p.m. in the Women's Club, Park Avenue, Flemington. Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the meeting.

New Flemington Methodist Episcopal Church Celebrates One Hundredth Anniversary

The Flemington Church was organized in 1823 and met in the Court House and "in a small house on the north side of Bonnell Street, the first house in this neighborhood, known subsequently as 'the Miller House,' and today as 'Fleming Castle.'"¹ In time a lot was purchased at 21-27 Main Street and the first Methodist Episcopal Church was erected, building having begun in the fall of 1825 which was completed for use in the spring of 1826.

This building served the congregation for sixty years during which their number grew to 250. Looking toward the future need for a larger Church building, in 1883 the lot at the corner of Maple and Main Streets in the center of Flemington was purchased for $5,000 from John T. Bird. His old frame house then occupied the site.

In 1886 the first Church building was sold and with $11,500 in cash and good subscriptions a new church was near reality. The Ladies' Building League of the Church set about raising money for the New Church Building Fund. The League's Festival on December 7, 1886 offered refreshments, and fancy tables. "The New Church", published by the League to announce the event included articles about the history of the congregation, lists of its officers, etc.

The advertisers were local businesses of one hundred years ago.

The new Church was built of light grey stone, the first of which was laid July 26th and the last November 24th. The edifice measures fifty-four feet wide and one hundred and twenty-one feet in length. The audience room is seventy-six feet by forty-eight feet and contains seating for four hundred and fifty persons. A window of noble proportions in the west, and a similar one in the south, with a rose window over, and smaller windows at either side of the pulpit affords abundant supply of light. Arranged in amphitheatrical form, with bowled floor and circular seats the plan provides facilities for seeing and hearing the occupant of the pulpit. Sliding doors connect the audience room with the chapel, where two hundred additional seats may be utilized. The tower rises to a height of eighty-five feet.²

RECORDS OF ABRAHAM WILLIAMSON,

Paymaster 4th Regiment, Hunterdon County, New Jersey, Militia

Seventy odd pages of the Williamson Papers in Special Collections and Archives, Rutgers University Libraries, are records made by Lt. Col. Abraham Williamson, paymaster of the 4th Regiment of the Hunterdon County Militia. These records list the names of more than three hundred men who lived in Hunterdon County during the period 1796-1805. They also tell us something of how the Hunterdon Militia operated during this period.

Abraham Williamson (1753-1816) lived in the Larison's Corner vicinity of Amwell Township. His father, John Williamson, was a prosperous farmer and miller who had settled in Hunterdon County around 1731. When Abraham Williamson reached the age of fifteen, his father apprenticed him to a bookkeeper. During the Revolution Abraham Williamson served as second lieutenant in Captain Corshon's Company, 3rd Regiment of the Hunterdon County Militia. He was captured by the British in December 1776, but was released on his word that he would not again take up arms against the British. He returned to his home and operated his farm and flour mill. His teams were used to haul supplies to Washington's forces.

In 1796 Abraham Williamson, age forty-three, was a prosperous farmer, miller and owner and breeder of fine horses. In that year he was named paymaster of the 4th Regiment of the Hunterdon Militia, with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

The history of the state militias begins in 1792, three years after George Washington had been sworn in as first president of the United States. The standing army had been reduced to one regiment of infantry and one battalion of artillery, and President Washington recognized the need for an armed force to serve in times of emergency.

Among the grievances against the King set forth in the Declaration of Independence were those pertaining to the military: that the King had "kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies," that he had rendered the military independent of the civil power, and that he had "quartered large bodies of armed troops among us."

In order to provide for the safety of the country and to avoid maintaining a large standing army, the Congress adopted "An Act More Effectively to Provide for the National Defence, by establishing an Uniform Militia throughout the United States." President Washington signed this act into law on May 8, 1792. The law provided "That each and every free able-bodied white male citizen of the respective States resident therein, who is or shall be of the age of eighteen years, and under the age of forty-five years shall severally and respectively be enrolled in the militia by the captain or commanding officer of the company within whose bounds such citizen shall reside."

Following the enactment of the Federal statute, the New Jersey General Assembly passed laws providing for organizing and training a state militia, subject to call by the central government as needed. Numerous supplements to the original laws were enacted, and by the time Abraham Williamson became paymaster of the 4th Regiment of Hunterdon County Militia, a detailed body of state law for governing the militia existed.

The assessor of each township was required to make a census of all free white males between the ages of eighteen and forty-five. Exceptions were made for ministers of the gospel, the vice-president of the United States, post office workers and stage drivers employed in carrying the United States mail, and several other categories. The Hunterdon County Militia Census of 1792 has survived and it was organized and put into print in 1936 by the late Hiram E. Deats.

In addition to being under eighteen, over forty-five, or disabled, there was another way for a man to be excused from militia duty. If he had a son as old as twelve, but under eighteen, he could enlist his son in any company of militia for the purpose of having him learn to beat the drum, play the fife, or blow the trumpet. The youth served under the instruction of a drum or fife major or trumpeter. When the trainee had qualified as a drummer, fifer, or trumpeter, the instructor was paid ten dollars. The boy's father was excused from militia duty for as long as his son performed or until he reached age eighteen.

Another provision of the law stated that "Any person who shall bring any kind of spiritous liquor to the place of exercise shall forfeit such liquor for the use of the poor."

The militiamen were formed into companies. Each company elected its own captain, lieutenant, and ensign. The captain then chose sergeants and corporals. Companies were formed into regiments of some eight companies. During the period that Abraham Williamson served as paymaster of the Hunterdon 4th Regiment, training was scheduled for May, June, September, and October — a total of four days a year. The purpose of the training was to provide the officers with an opportunity to inspect arms, ammunition, and accoutrements, to superintend exercises and maneuvers, and to introduce discipline. Noncommissioned officers and privates failing to report for militia training were subject to a fine of one dollar for "neglect of duty." The fines for commissioned officers were higher. Failure to pay fines could result in seizure of property or confinement to jail.

New Jersey laws specified many other requirements for the militia. A noncommissioned officer or private was required to have a good musket or firelock, sufficient bayonet and belt, two spare flints, a knapsack, a pouch and powder horn, twenty balls suited to the bore of his rifle, and a quarter of a pound of powder. All of this equipment was to be furnished at the expense of the man. If the major in command determined that a man was not able to arm and equip himself, no fine was to be charged, otherwise there was a fine of fifty cents.

Commissioned officers were required to appear for training in uniform, with a sword and hanger, a bayonet and belt, and other equipment. A commissioned cavalry officer had to furnish his own horse of at least fourteen and one-half hands high, a sword and pair of pistols, holsters of which should be covered with bearskin caps. Noncommissioned officers and privates in the cavalry were also required to furnish their own horses at least fourteen and one-half hands high, saddle, bridle, and other equipment. Service in the cavalry was by volunteers.

Two years before Abraham Williamson assumed his duties as paymaster of the 4th Regiment of Hunterdon Militia, the New Jersey Militia was called to active duty to assist in putting down the Pennsylvania Insurrection of 1794 — usually called the "Whisky Rebellion." This action is considered to be the first real test of the new Federal Government. It established the power of the central government to levy taxes and to use force to restore order.

Around two hundred men from Hunterdon County served in the Whisky Rebellion, making up three companies and a portion of another company. Captain Burrows Smith commanded the 4th Regiment of Infantry. Captain Smith is also listed as company commander in the 4th Regiment of Hunterdon Militia in the Williamson paymaster records. An Abraham Williamson served as private in Captian Amos Smith's company, 3rd Regiment of Infantry, during the Whisky Rebellion. This company was made up of men from Hunterdon and Sussex Counties. This man was probably Abraham Tenbrook Williamson, son of Abraham Williamson (1753-1816). Abraham Tenbrook Williamson was around twenty years of age in 1794.

The earliest laws governing the state militia required that company captains collect the fines assessed for failure to report for militia training. In 1796 the New Jersey Assembly passed a law requiring that fines be paid to a paymaster, that the paymaster's records be kept in a book provided for that purpose, and that the records should be examined by "three judicious persons" appointed by the Board of Freeholders of the county. Abraham Williamson's training as a bookkeeper and his reputation as a person of integrity fitted him for his role as paymaster. He wrote his records in a clear, legible hand, and the records give evidence that they were prepared with care.

The Williamson paymaster records deal with the collection and payment of fines for failure to report for militia training. The papers may be classified into five categories:

1. Returns from captains of militia companies listing names of men who failed to attend training on specific dates of May, June, September, and October during the years 1796 through 1804. The fine for non-performance of military duty, one dollar, was in many instances reported as 7/6 - seven shillings and six pence. Ninety pence equalled one dollar at the time. The fine for neglect of gun was fifty cents. On some of these papers the paymaster noted that the fines had been paid; on others he indicated that the names had been reported to constables for collection.

2. Receipts signed by Abraham Williamson showing that he had received money from constables who had collected fines.

3. A document titled "Money yet due on Melitia Warrents uncollected" for the period July 11, 1797, to January 27, 1804. The names of twenty men who had not paid their fines are listed on this document.

4. Ledger entries headed "DR The 4th Regiment of Hunterdon Militia" and "CONTRA." These entries cover September 28, 1797, to August 12, 1805.

5. Receipts showing the termination of Abraham Williamson's service as paymaster.

It is estimated that the returns of absentees made by company captains cover around two-thirds of the training sessions that were held during the period covered. The reports deal only with fines due and collected and money paid out. They do not contain rosters of men.

The first full report of "delinquents" in the Williamson papers is for May training 1797. It is headed: "Account of Delinquents Returned to me as Lt. Colo. of the 4 Rigmint of Hunterdon Malitia & Justice of Peace of said County for neglect of May Training 1797 Viz." There followed a listing of fifty-three names reported by six captains and one lieutenant. The last reports in the paymaster records cover battalion practice on May 31, 1804, and regimental practice on June 7, 1804. There were eight of these 1804 reports, signed by the captain or ensign of each company.

The procedure for collecting fines is described in a warrant issued October 14, 1803, by David Bishop, Justice of the Peace.

"Hunterdon County David Bishop, Esq., one of the Justices of sd. County — To Any Constable of Amwell

"Whereas Abraham Williamson Paymaster of the 4th Regiment of the Militia of sd. County hath transmitted to me the hereinafter named Delinquents for nonpayment of fines which have been Returned to him by the several Captains of said Regiment fore non attendance of Batalion & Regimental Training in May and June last. These are therefore to Request you to Levy Distress on the goods and Chattels of the said several Delinquents and make sale thereof to amount of the sums annexed to each of there Respective names together with thirty six cents each for cost and pay the money when collected into the hands of the said paymaster Retaining from each the cost above enterlined in your own hand and for want of sufficient goods and chattles whereon to Levy you are to Convey the said Delinquent or Delinquents to the Keeper of the gaol of this county who is hereby Required to Recieve the said Delinquents into his gaol and Custody there safely to keep until the said fine and cost aforesaid be fully paid or untill he or they be thence Delivered by due Course of Law. Given under my hand and seal this 14th day of October 1803. David Bishop JP"

The following list of noncommissioned officers and privates were reported absent from military training on the date/dates beside each name. These men were between the ages of eighteen and forty-five.
